

Call for Papers

The Goettingen Journal of International Law (GoJIL) seeks contributions for its 12.1.-Issue.

Deadline for submissions is

1st September 2021

For our first issue of 2022, we seek authors that reflect on international legal issues raised by the ongoing global pandemic and its direct and indirect effects.

Furthermore, we welcome contributions on current developments in Space Law and the Law of the Sea.

Apart from this focus, we welcome any contribution to the current discourse in International Law, including papers with a theoretical and interdisciplinary approach.

The word count is about 15.000 words (excluding footnotes and abstract).

Submissions can be made on our website: <https://gojil.eu/for-authors/submit-here>

For queries and clarification – please contact Ida Oks at info@gojil.eu.

We are looking forward to your submission!

The GoJIL is an e-journal that focuses on international law. Founded in December 2007 by an interdisciplinary group of students at the University of Goettingen, GoJIL is the first German student-run law journal published entirely in English language.

The journal seeks to foster debate among scholars of international law with its numerous and diverse fields, e.g. international criminal, humanitarian and economic law, while also offering contributions from related disciplines such as international relations, history or economics.

For this purpose, GoJIL runs a permanent open call for papers, ensuring high quality by means of a thorough selection process regarding the significance of the topic for the respective academic discourse and having every submission undergo a double blind peer review.

GoJIL is published in accordance with open access principles.
